HARDSHIPS OF A LUMBER CAMP. After six days' walking, footsore, hungry, ragged and nearly exhausted, a Lynn, Mass., man has returned from a lumber camp in New Hampshire and tells a tale

Then several of them started to tramp back to Lynn, one man arriving yesterday and placing his case in the hands of a local attorney. He states that others of the party are scattered along the road in hospitals in Manchester, Concord and Nashua, N. H., while others are detained at the camp, and will not be permitted to leave until they have settled claims brought against them by the New Hampshire firm for their board. The Lynn agency is much exercised over the matter.

Vivors of the disaster, and to the families of those known to have been killed in the wreck. In case, however, that those who are interested do not receive them in the regular course they may get them by writing to Senator Harris, the chairman of the select committee, at the Senate, or by calling at the meeting room, which is the same as the room of the committee on the District of Columbia.

His stage line in the District, which ran from Georgetown to the Navy Yard, and on 7th street, was the immediate predecessor of the present Washington and Georgetown railroad. One of the provisions of the Washington and Georgetown charter was that the franchises that would be conflicted with should be purchased. Mr. Vanderwerken's was the most important and was purchased at a high figure. Through the sale he became the possessor of a large quantity of stock in the new road, which he held to his death. He ried to Miss Clara Hasken. Miss Hasken new road, which he held to his death. He was probably one of the largest holders in the company. It was in 1862 that Mr. Vanderwerken sold out his stage line, after having run it for nearly a score of years. Deceased was originally from New Jersey, where he was engaged in the manufacture of wagons and other vehicles. After his largest Washington enterprise, he engaged extensively in the quarrying of stone. Deceased was originally from New Jersey, where he was engaged in the manufacture of wagons and other vehicles. After his largest Washington enterprise, he engaged extensively in the quarrying of stone. Rheumatism of the heart is said to have caused death. The funeral will take place on Thursday at 1 o'clock from Oak Hill Chapel. Deceased leaves three daughters, Mrs. A. B. Grunwell of Georgetown being one of them, and the other two residing in distant cities. The Virginia home of the Vanderwerkens is a beautiful mansion surrounded by 1,100 acres of land. Deceased's estate is said to be worth half a million dollars. Mrs. Vanderwerken is lying dangerously ill.

They Are to Contain Much Informs tion Concerning Victims. The blank forms of application that have been devised by the select committee of the Senate for the investigation of the Ford Theater disaster, as briefly alluded to in ast evening's Star, are of two kinds. One is to be filed by the heirs of those who were killed in the wreck or have died since as a result of their injuries. It is to contain the name of the deceased and the date of death, "from injuries received at the Ford Theater disaster." The claimant is to set forth the following facts: Full name of the deceased, his age, trade or profes sion, place held at the time of death, when appointed to his position in the R. and P. division of the War Department, from what state appointed, and the residence there address in Washington at the time of death, M. Then are to follow the names and addresses of the attending surgeons, a statement as to whether or not there was an autopsy, the date and place and name of the attending surgeon the attending surgeons. the attending surgeon, the name and address of the undertaker, the place of burial, and the names of two witnesses to the causes of death. The claimant is then to camp in New Hampshire and tells a tale of hardship and ill-usage.

In the latter part of December, with fourteen other men, he left for Lincoln, N. H. to work at a logging camp. They had been engaged through a Lynn agency and were furnished the customary employment slips. These have all been returned to the Lynn agency marked "O. K." and "Accepted," but the men state that when they reached the logging camp, after paying about $4$ in rafiroad fares, which consumed all their money, they were told that there was no work for them, and that the firm had never desired or attempted to hire any men from Lynn through any agency. The men delivered their employment slips and the firm retained them.

Without funds or friends, the men asked to be given work until they could carneously at the wages paid, $20 per month, to enable them to get home. Some secured this favor, but were forced to sleep in the open air, and one man had his hair frozen to a log one night, and in awakening pulled a portion of his scalp off with the hair. They were worked hard and poorly fed on beans and bread of the coarsest description, and, finally, when they asked for a settlement, were told that they had earned.

Then several of them started to tramp back to Lynn, one man arriving yesterday and placing his case in the hands of a local stream. We have the attent of the deceased and its value, whether there was a life or accident insurance, and in what companies and for what amounts, it what companies and for what amounts, it was a life or accident insurance, and in what companies and for expenses attending the injury, sickness and burial, the full manes and addresses of next-of-kin and legal representatives, their property and in what companies and for subtending the injury, sickness and burial, the full manes and addresses of next-of-kin and legal representatives, their property and in industry the preliminary statements are about the same. George L. ferer by the operation. He claims that his wife was under some mysterious influence. She was abducted before his eyes, and when he went to her rescue he himsel was put under the same hypnotic spell and could not move a muscle.

Orawich is a resident of Milnesville and is a prominent and well-to-do citizen of that place. He has always had a good standing and was recognized as a shrewd ble money and three years ago was mar-est friends. They had not seen each other in years and their meeting was a warm one.

Orawich introduced his friend into his family and he was extended the hospitality of their abode. He remained with them a week, during which time he seemed to have the utmost respect for his friend and hostess. He then left, but returned a few days later and engaged board in the vicinity of Orawich's home. He visited his old schoolmate frequently and shortly after the latter began to notice a peculiar change coming over his wife. She would remain pensive for half an hour at a time and when she recovered herself would appear to be much agitated.

The husband had implicit confidence in his wife and did not dream that her changed disposition was in any way due to Penawack. Then an incident transpired which made him suspicious. He noticed that while looking at his wife across the table the latter seemed to respond to some mysterious influence. After the visitor departed Orawich spoke to his wife of it. She seemed to evade him and this worried him more, so he resolved to watch Penawack closely, and became convinced that he was the cause of his wife's changed condition.

Sunday evening they sat down to supper and the husband and wife chatted pleasantly. Penawack called during the meal, but seemed to be uneasy and remained but a few minutes. After his leaving Mrs. Orawich announced her intention of visiting a neighbor and dressed herself for that purpose. The husband decided to go out, too. He followed his wife and was not long in discovering that his suspicions were not unfounded. His wife preceded him but a short distance and on the road he could see the form of a man, whom he recognized as Penawack. The man was in waiting and when the woman approached him he stooped as if to en.brace her.

The sight was too much for the injured hishand and he sprang at the destroyer of his happiness. He meant to kill him if he could. Just as he was about to strike him the man raised his hand and, as if compelled by some occult power, Orawich dropped his hands. He could not move a muscie. He stood there rooted to the spot. He retained his faculties and saw the other take his wife's arm and hurry her away. take his wife's arm and hurry her away. When the husband recovered himself they were gone. He was greatly excited and unnaturally nervous. He reached his home almost exhausted.

The Husband Hypnotized When he regained his senses he made an investigation of the premises. He then dishouse was gone. He was then convinced that the movements of his wife and false friend had been deliberately planned. He came to the police station at Hazleton yescame to the police station at Hazleton yes-terday morning and with tears in his eyes related the story of his grief. The runaway pair were traced to Hazleton, but there all clues were lost. The case has excited the deepest interest. Some medical men who claimed to have a knowledge of hypnotism assert that the symptoms and effects de-scribed by Orawich are the result of hyp-notic influence.
